

3.1: Introducing week three

Welcome back everyone to week three of our course on forced and precarious labour in the global economy. Last week we looked at the problems associated with global supply chains. This week you're once again in the good hands of Neil, who is going to take you through some of the ways in which these problems might be addressed politically and strategically.

Thanks very much Joel. Yes indeed, last week we looked at the root causes of exploitation in global businesses and this week we are going to be looking at what we can do about it. Things like innovative forms of labour organising, increased labour protection, redistribution of land, of money and of the resources that people need to stay safe in the world of work. Welcome back.

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Forced and Precarious Labour in the Global Economy Online Course

This transcript was prepared for the online course Forced and Precarious Labour in the Global Economy by Beyond Trafficking and Slavery (openDemocracy). It has been lightly edited for clarity. This course was originally released on the edX.org platform in 2018, where it has now been archived. As of 2021 it is available on opendemocracy.net.

